DIVERSIFIED APOSTLE OF MIXED FARMING SAYS, HOGS NOT OSTRICHES

Plowing Hog Pasture, Australian Sunset, and Holman James.

The most diversified apostle of mixed farming now is touring the United States, Holman James of Saskatchewan, Canada, and of London, but late of Nairobi, Africa, and previously of Australia. His dictum is "hogs and lots of them" from experience in all those countries with cattle, ostriches, rhinos and horses.

Mr. James' agricultural life on Australian ranches was interrupted while at the head of a regiment of Australian horse he fought the Boers. Then he established the British government horse breeding farm in the Transvaal. Next he diversified in Central Africa as owner of 300 square miles, contending with lions, rhinoceros, and elephants which carelessly trampled his fields.
Later, England. Finally 5,000-acre ranch at Leslie, on the Canadian Northern Railway. What to grow for profit, wheat and more wheat?

Hogs. His first grain crop was forty bushels of wheat, ninety of oats, but his big tractors plowed that his porkers might reap. He runs his African estates and Canadian ranch by wire, but on a bet made in London, also is doing a devilish act as "Fred Lindsay," with the thirty-foot stock whip which he used in Australia.
